

What role for non-state Actors in a Paris Agreement

Are cities and companies bridging the gap?

The COP-21-presidency has introduced "agenda for solutions" in an attempt to elevate the role of non-state actors in a Paris Agreement. Is there a formal role for non-state actors in an inter-governmental agreement? Would it support effective implementation or perhaps weaken state responsibility? What can be done to harness the potentials of non state actors in Paris agreement?

Speakers:

- » Philipp Pattberg, IVM Vrije Universitet Amsterdam
"The fragmentation of the climate regime"
- » Oscar Widerberg, IVM Vrije Universitet Amsterdam
"Are cities and companies bridging the gap?"
- » Karin Bäckstrand, Stockholm University
"Role of non state actors in a fragmented climate regime"

Comments by:

- » Veronique Massenet, Deputy Director, Climate Change and Sustainable Development, French Ministry for Ecology, Sustainable Development and Energy, Responsible for the "Agenda for Solutions".
- » Sander Chan, German Development Institute

Moderator:

- » Daniel Engström Stenson, Fores

